*Oliver Cole is currently a sophomore at Mason Gross School of the Arts at Rutgers University, where he is currently pursuing a degree in cello performance. At the start of 4th grade, he picked up the cello. Before going to Rutgers University, he previously studied under Stephen Czarkowski. Oliver is a young musician who has multiple years of ensemble and chamber experience including a chamber group masterclass with cellist Paul Katz. Featuring selections from Tim Rice and a guest appearance by Broadway legend Adam Pascal, Oliver was fortunate enough to perform in the Young Artists of America show, The Circle of Life. Led by Maestro Piotr Gajewski, Oliver has also played in the Summer String Institute, a summer festival led by members of the National Philharmonic. He has also performed in the Landon Symphonette, an orchestra comprised of mostly professional musicians that performs under the leadership of Maestro Stephen Czarkowski.
